Introduction

When I first starting blogging about 21 months ago, the first thing I focused on was content. It was ALL ABOUT THE CONTENT.

As I grew my content base, it became all about ads and getting traffic. After completely rocking my ads revenue, I moved onto Pinterest and rocked that.

Now, I'm working on affiliates. Oh boy do I love affiliates! It is incredibly easy to make money from affiliates. All you have to do is match up your topic or post with the right affiliate product that is available.

But, this is a huge problem. Because nowhere online (at least that I've seen and I've been searching Google for DAYS!), has any sort of list of all the affiliate programs. Ejunkie is by far one of the best programs to go through because many bloggers offer a good 40-50% commissions, however, Ejunkie doesn't have a list!

How do you find the product you are looking for? It's near impossible!!!

I guess that you can search product by product each time you need one, but that becomes really time consuming. And how can you stand apart from the pack of everyone else doing the same programs all the time and compete on their level with the same products. You need new, fresh ideas. Affiliate products that others aren't doing to death, so that you can rock your affiliate commissions.

This is where this list comes in.

While I still am a big fan of Amazon, I do like to branch out with better and higher commission structures without feeling boxed in.

Huge Affiliate Resource List for Bloggers

This list is meant to be all-inclusive and up-to-date to grow with the times, so if you have a product you'd like to list in here, just contact me with your sign up URL and your product URL and if it fits the overall theme of this list, I'll get it in.

Here are all the affiliate programs that popped up as I was scouring online for weeks trying to put this list together for you. Each one will give the link of the actual product first and then give the link of where to sign up. Some of these programs, you'll only have to sign up once and qualify for all of them, but I tried to separate all of the products into categories that you could easily look up when writing your posts.

Companies (A-Z List)

- Amazon - of course, the affiliate giant. Definitely a great thing to put on your blog.
- Ebates - this is a fantastic company that I absolutely adore. EVERY time I shop online, I go through them and earn cash back on the purchases that I'm already making, and it REALLY adds up! If you click here, you can get a free $10 gift card (no strings attached; I promise!)
- eBay - eBay has an affiliate program as well and it's pretty good. If you can't find something on Amazon or want to do price comparison's, this is a great option for you.

- ePantry - one of my favorite affiliate programs. Each time you refer someone to their site, not only do they get $10 off their $20 order, but you earn $10 credit for their products. I never pay for household products because I always have enough in sales, which makes it super nice, especially since their products are such high quality.
- Escalate - I love this company. They are great. Once you sign up, you can choose the companies and brands you add to your site as an affiliate. The cool thing is that, unlike CJ or Share a Sale, you don't have to be approved for each company. You can just see the brand and use the link when appropriate.
- Groupon - Groupon is a very well-known company, so very easy to promote and you can earn up to 10% of sales.
- PicMonkey - I loved their company, but they did not have an affiliate program, so I wrote them and asked for one. They said they would make one and I worked with them to beta test it all out. It's a great affiliate program and a great picture site to use.
- RescueTime - is another one of my favorite websites. You can track how you spend your time online. It tells you exactly where you spend your time on a weekly basis and how much of it and best of all, when you refer them to your readers, you can earn a commission.
- ShareASale - I like this company, because I can apply to whatever company I want through their site. Then, it's easy enough to grab an affiliate link and plug it into the site. A few of my favorite companies that go through ShareASale: Gymboree, Julep, Zulily, StudioPress (Genesis and child themes).
- ShopHer - this is the same type of set up as Escalate. I don't make as much with ShopHer as I do Escalate, but it's still a decent amount of money and worth the time invested to go with them.
- Zaycon Fresh – another one of my favorite affiliate programs. You earn $1 for each person who places an order. Just like ePantry, you do not need to be a blogger to use this referral system. Simply tell your friends and have them go through your link. You can send your friends the link by email. It's super simple and very effective. You use the money you earn on products with their company, which their products are, of course, amazing!

By providing this list, I am not agreeing nor endorsing every product contained within the list, as I've not gone through and read all the books, products, and printables that are being offered. Please consider these at your own discretion to see if these products match up with your blog's overall purpose and mission. The companies list is something that I can say I personally go through, but some of the other products may just not fit my blog, so I haven't looked into them. Just passing them on as a resource to you.*
